In the year 1876 a girl baby came to a poor family named Kim, in the capital of Korea. At that time there were no missionaries in Korea; it was known as the "Hermit Nation." Mr. Kim and his little wife called their little baby Chyom Tong (pronounced Chum Dong). In the year 1885 some American Methodist missionaries came to Korea, and began work near the place where Mr. Kim lived, and it so happened that Mr. Kim became employed by the Rev. Mr. Appenzeller, one of these missionaries, and thus he heard about the girls' school which Mrs. M. F. Scranton opened for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Mr. Kim thought it might be a good place to put one of his daughters, as she would thus get her rice and clothes, and "perhaps the new doctrine there taught wouldn't harm her much"; so, fortunately for Chyom Tong, she was the one selected, and thus became a pupil in the first school ever established for Korean girls.

Chyom Tong proved very quick to learn, and soon surpassed the other girls in the school. She studied the Bible and catechism in Korean, and she also studied Chinese and English. Little by little she began to understand the gospel truths, and she learned to abhor lying and stealing, two of the sins so common among Koreans.

Her Conversion

Chyom Tong felt the need of a clean heart, and began to pray in secret for it. When she had been in the mission school nearly a year the usual rainy season came round, and it seemed as if it rained in greater torrents than ever before. One night as Chyom Tong lay in her room listening to the heavy rainfall outside, the thought came to her that perhaps the Lord was going to punish the sins of her people with a flood, as he did in the time of Noah, which she had just learned about, and she expressed this thought to her roommate, who said she was just thinking those same thoughts. Chyom Tong suggested that they get upon their knees and confess all their sins to God, and ask him to take them away and give them clean hearts, so they would not be afraid to die. This they did, and their simple faith was rewarded; God's own peace filled their hearts, and took away all their fears, and they fell asleep God's forgiven children.

The next day Chyom Tong told the other girls about the change which had come to her heart, and invited them all to her room that night to have a little prayer meeting. She decorated her room with flowers, and got some hymn books, and they sang and prayed, and had such a good time that they decided to do it every night. Their Korean teacher, hearing about the meeting, asked whether she might attend, and then the other women came in and this was the origin of the first woman’s prayer meeting in Korea.

The Prospective Physician

When Chyom Tong was about fourteen, Dr. Rosetta Sherwood was sent to Korea by the Woman’s Foreign Missionary Society, to take up the medical work in the woman’s hospital and dispensary, which Dr. Meta Howard had been obliged to leave the year before, on account of ill health. As the work had already been organized, and many patients had been waiting a long time to consult the woman doctor, she had to commence work in the hospital the second day after her arrival, with no knowledge of the language. As Chyom Tong by this time had outstripped all the other girls in her acquisition of English, she was sent to the hospital several hours each day to interpret for Doctor Sherwood, and together with two or three other girls, the doctor taught her physiology, and later materia medica, while each day they received practical lessons in the dispensary in putting up drugs and learning to care for the sick. At first Chyom Tong liked the interpreting and the study better than the other part of the new work, and naturally rather shrank from surgery; but she soon learned to appreciate it all, and after assisting at an operation for harelip, surprised her friends by declaring she would like to be able to perform such an operation herself, and from that time on never gave up her determination to become a doctor, should God open the way.

Esther's Baptism

Sunday, January 25, 1891, Chyom Tong was baptized by the Rev. F. Ohlinger, and received the name of "Esther." As in Korea a woman loses her given name when she is married, and is called by none till she becomes a mother, when she is known only as such a one's mother," the missionaries have to give the women and girls new names in baptism, and quite frequently they use Bible names; so the name Esther was chosen for Chyom Tong. Esther said her "heart felt very happy" that day, and she clearly showed she appreciated the true import of the service.

The following quotations from Esther's letters to Doctor Sherwood will give an idea of her style of thought, and show that a Korean girl's heart is not so different from that of an American girl, after all: "My very dear friend, I will tell you one story. You are an American people, and I am Korean girl, but I love you like sister, and I want you to please love like your own sister. Jesus is our eldest brother. I do right, then I am Jesus' sister, and you are Jesus' sister, too. To-day I am full of joy; to-day
I shine very bright light.” Another time she writes in a different mood, probably after some reproof: “You are wise more than me. I am unwise; please think I am unwise, and forgive me 490 times, my dear doctor. I am Korean girl, you are American lady. I know your heart a little, you know my heart very well, my heart is narrow, narrow. I cannot tell how much my heart is narrow. I get angry quick; my heart is just like your stove that gets red-hot so quickly. I hope my heart will become clear just like glass, and wide just like the world. God is our Father; he helps you and me all the time, and see your heart and my heart also. God sent you out to Korea, and sent me to this house, and I think God wants me to help you many years. Please do not forget me if you will be one hundred years old, or if you go to America.”

HER MARRIAGE

Time passed rapidly on, and Esther became sixteen years old; her father had died, her two elder sisters were married, and her mother and Korean friends became very anxious that Esther should be married, as most Korean girls are before the age of fourteen. As girls have to wear their hair in a long braid down the back until they are married, even the dispensary patients could not help exclaiming when they saw her: “Why, such a big girl, and not married; what can be the matter?” There is no such thing as an unmarried woman in Korea, except the dancing girls, and perhaps a few so deformed or diseased that "go-betweens" cannot arrange a match for them. So though Esther feared marrying would interfere with her cherished idea of going sometime to America to graduate in medicine, yet she was so tormented by her relatives that she decided she would have to abide by the customs of her people. Her friends said that if the missionaries did not find a husband for her they would get one from the country; and as that meant a heathen, her missionary friends began to look around, and finally decided upon a Mr. Pak (pronounced "a" as in "par"), a young man converted in Doctor Hall's work; so the engagement was arranged by a "go-between," as according to Korean custom husband and wife must not see each other until the marriage day.

Making Rapid Progress

On May 24, 1893, they were married by the Christian ceremony. As Esther had never known any men except Doctor Hall and a few other missionaries, it was no more than natural that she should have been at first rather disappointed in her husband, who, though quite as good and better than most Korean husbands, was of course rather different from the ideal Esther had gained from what she knew of American husbands. It was over a year before she could say she loved her husband. In the meantime, however, Esther continued faithful in her work and studies, and became more useful than ever.

As a Foreign Missionary

Korean people dislike living in any other place than that in which their family has lived for generations, but when Mrs. Hall asked Esther if she would be willing to go to Pyeng Yang, one hundred and eighty miles away, to work for Jesus, she replied: "I will go wherever Lord open the door for me; if he open door in Pyeng Yang, I will go; I give my body and soul and heart to the Lord; my body and my heart and my soul are all the Lord's things, and I give my life to teach my people about God, even if people kill me. I do not hope I get rich, or have many pretty things, but I want to work for Jesus most of all." So in April, 1894, she and her husband accompanied Doctor and Mrs. Hall to Pyeng Yang. Her missionary zeal was somewhat tried by her first experience with seasickness, but it stood the test.

Brave Under Persecution

Mr. Pak and Esther proved faithful helpers at Pyeng Yang. They were quite brave during those three days of severe persecution. Several Pyeng Yang Christians were thrown into prison. One day Mr. Pak was seized by his top-knot, beaten and kicked, and ordered to be carried off to prison, but Doctor Hall was able to rescue him, to Esther's great relief. Later, when the persecution had subsided, Esther proved efficient help to Mrs. Hall in opening the first Christian work for the women and children of this city of one hundred thousand people, called the "Sodom of Korea." After the great battle of Pyeng Yang was fought, Doctor Hall returned to follow up the work there, contracted typhus fever, and returned home to die. His last words were to tell Mrs. Hall not to regret his going to Pyeng Yang, for he said, "I did it for Jesus' sake, and he will reward me." Mrs. Hall decided it would be best for her to return to America for a season. Esther at once begged leave to go with her, and Mrs. Hall thought perhaps the opportunity had now come for Esther to pursue her long-cherished idea of studying medicine and receiving permission from the mission, and a little financial help from individuals, she decided to bring her. Hesitating to separate Esther for so long a time from her husband, who had not had so good advantages even in Korea as she had, Mrs. Hall thought it wiser to bring both. On their arrival in America Mr. Pak gave himself most industriously to the study of English, and at the same time saved enough from his earnings to help his wife quite substantially in preparing for her medical studies.

Knowing that Esther had several things to discourage her, Mrs. Hall wrote to her asking her whether she was not inclined to give up the idea of becoming a regular physician, and return to Korea with her. In her reply Esther said: "While I am here, I would like to have you live in America, but I cannot please only me; and also I do not wish to be selfish, and hinder your going back on account of me, but I like you to return and help our poor sisters before I am ready. I know God will send me a good faithful friend to help me. I do not have a mind that I will give up learning to be a doctor, if I can get into college safely. I know I will have no other chance if I give it up now, so I don't think to give it up, if it is the Lord's will. Also Mr. Pak wants me to learn to be a doctor more than anything. I will try all my best, and after I have done all my best, and can't learn, then I have to give it up, but not before."

In 1896 arrangements were made whereby Mrs. Pak entered the Woman's Medical College of Baltimore—the first Korean woman to take up the study of medicine. She obtained her degree and returned to Korea in 1900, Doctor Hall having preceded her by three years. During Esther's last college year her husband died in Baltimore of tuberculosis. During the first ten months after her return she treated nearly three thousand cases, amply fulfilling the expectations of her friends.

For ten years it was Doctor Pak's privilege to continue her noble work for her own people, and she was always ready with trained skill and loving sympathy to help them in the dispensary clinic, the hospital ward, or in their humble homes. She was also of great assistance in the Bible Institutes for women, teaching most enthusiastically any subject required from hygiene to church history.

May 28, 1909, was a crowning day for her and for those who had tried to awaken a deep interest in the education of Korea's daughters as well as sons. That day the Woman's Educational and the Woman's Enterprise societies combined in showing honors to Korea's first women college graduates, Mrs. Esther Kim Pak, M.D., and Mrs. N. K. Ha, M.A. They were invited to the capital, and were conveyed by carriages in grand style to the old Mulberry Palace grounds, where addresses were delivered, appropriate gold medals awarded to each, followed by a collation. The picture of Dr. Pak, in her college cap and gown, adorning this cover was taken at this time; it shows the gold medal with which she was decorated, and of which she was justly proud.

But already disease had laid its fell hand upon our young doctor. After several years of a brave but losing battle with tuberculosis, she laid down her work here, April 13, 1910, to receive her coronation on high.

Who will take up her work? A work now so overwhelming it cannot possibly be met with a few foreign doctors! There are ten thousand Christian Korean women and children who, in time of pain and sickness, should have the skilled care that you would want your mother or child to have, to say nothing of the six million heathen women and children who are also looking to us more and more for such aid.
